PREFACE.

The present lists, forming together the sixth of the Library's bibliographical publications, were prepared at the suggestion of the Reference Librarian, in order to collect for convenient use the titles of books of a special kind, much called for, but scattered throughout the catalogue. It is hoped that they will suggest many sources of information on specific points or subjects which otherwise might be overlooked. The scope of both lists is, of course, that of the Library, and includes the social, physical, and natural sciences and their applications. The lists contain 1,610 titles and are intended to include all material in the Library within their scope.

The arrangement of the titles within each list is that of the classed catalogue, but the number of titles entered in more than one place has been reduced to a minimum. The order within the smallest subdivisions is chronological, the latest work being given first; but as the headings in most cases cover several subdivisions, the reasons for the arrangement under each heading are generally not apparent. Peculiarities of typographical arrangement have been determined chiefly by the previous use of the same matter on printed catalogue cards, the type for which has been electrotyped. Inconsistencies in the form of entry are due to the fact that the older titles are not always reprinted when a change of form has been made. The most conspicuous change has been caused by the adoption of the cataloguing rules formulated by a committee of the American Library Association and accepted by the Library of Congress. Titles prepared since April, 1903, are in accordance with these rules.

The index gives in one alphabetical arrangement subjects, titles, and names of persons, institutions, and places.
